TEETH OF THE DOG

The name comes from the fact that while the field was under construction in the 1960s, the workers referred to the sharp coral rocks as "dog teeth", which inspired the name of the field. The course has Par-72, where the obstacles offer an unforgettable experience, given the unexpected winds, courtesy of nature and the wonderful views of the Caribbean. The best caddies are ready and willing to play the players through the game. He has been a host of countless national and international tournaments among which are the PGA Tour Dominican Republic Open and on occasion the Latin American Amateur Championship (LAAC).

THE LINKS

The second creation of Dye, The Links, opened its doors in 1976. This field consists of a more traditional style, with Scottish and English inspiration. The field is located inland and is surrounded by mango and flamboyant trees. The field is a bit narrower and requires more approaches, which makes it more challenging. The water comes into play in five holes and the undulating terrain dotted with Bay and Guinea grass, sand traps, several and complements for the challenge.

DYE FORE

The third Dye project is Dye Fore, a unique field with seven of the cliffs that fall 300 feet into the Chavón River. This Par-72, 7,740-yard course offers spectacular views of the Caribbean Sea, Dominican mountains, Chavón River, Casa de Campo Marina and the artist village of Altos de Chavón.
